Ram and his wife, Sita, were deeply in love. They had a beautiful life together, filled with joy and laughter. But tragedy struck when Sita was killed in a car accident. Ram was devastated by her death. He couldn't believe that she was gone. He felt lost and alone.

In the months that followed, Ram struggled to cope with his grief. He withdrew from his friends and family. He stopped going to work. He couldn't sleep. He couldn't eat. He was a shadow of his former self.

One day, Ram was walking through the forest when he came across a brook. He sat down on the bank and stared at the water. As he watched the water flow by, he began to think about his life. He realized that he couldn't go on living the way he was. He needed to find a way to heal his heart.

Ram decided to start going to therapy. He also started attending a support group for grieving spouses. He began to talk about his feelings and to share his memories of Sita. Slowly but surely, Ram began to heal. He learned to accept Sita's death and to find joy in life again.
