The Victims

- Paul Haigh, 63, was a respected businessman and pillar of the community. He was known for his kindness and generosity, and his senseless murder sent shockwaves through Frankston.

- Wendy Abrahams, 52, was a loving mother and wife. She was a devoted member of her local church and was known for her warmth and compassion.

- Colleen Adams, 44, was a dedicated nurse and volunteer. She was known for her selflessness and unwavering commitment to helping others.

The Crime

On that fateful night, the victims were brutally attacked while working in a local milk bar. The assailant used a firearm and a knife, leaving no survivors. The crime scene was described as one of the most horrific ever witnessed in Frankston, leaving the community in a state of shock and disbelief.

The Investigation

The Victoria Police immediately launched an extensive investigation into the murders, but despite years of relentless efforts, the case remains unsolved. Hundreds of interviews were conducted, thousands of leads were pursued, but the perpetrator remains at large.

Over the years, the Frankston Murders have become one of Australia's most high-profile unsolved crimes. Numerous theories have emerged, but none have been substantiated. The victims' families have endured years of agony and unanswered questions, while the community has been haunted by the mystery.

25 Years On

A quarter of a century after the Frankston Murders, the case remains open, and the pain of the victims' loved ones lingers. The families continue to seek justice and closure, and the Victoria Police remain committed to finding the perpetrator.

The Frankston Murders serve as a tragic reminder of the fragility of life and the lasting pain that unsolved crimes can inflict. It is a haunting tale of unanswered questions, relentless pursuit, and the enduring hope for justice.

Remember the victims. Demand justice.
